day school near their home. When the household did not put in an appearance on the morning following the tragedy suspicion was aroused that something was wrong, and a neighbor or two went to the house to investigate. A back door was open, and when the investigating party entered they found Parks, his wife and one daughter and the son cold in death. Miss Eva was alive, but unconscious. Each one of the five had been struck on the head with the pole of an axe, which was found near the scene of the kill-ing. In a short time the news of the horri-ble affair spread and the crowd around the house bad grown until it numbered hun-dreds of persons. In it was a negro named Johnson. His actions were looked upon as suspicious, and he was placed under arrest. A confession was made by him which implicated a negro prescher by the name of Taylor, and Charles Davis, another colored man, who was always looked upon as a quiet, inoffensive man, well liked in the community. The mob then started off with Johnson. While on the road Johnson said that he had While on the road Johnson said that he had not told the truth, and insisted that he knew nothing about the killing. He was hanged to a telegraph pole until he was nearly dead, and then cut down. He was detained until his alleged companions could be captured, when they were all taken to Charlestown for trial. Johnson again denied having anything to do with the crime. Excitement in the county was high, and a Excitement in the county was high, and a few nights after a party of one hundred lynchers rode into the quiet little town for the purpose of hanging the three suspected negroes. The jailor refused to give up the keys to the prison. Time was precious, and the mob made an attack on the jail door with sledgehammers. In a short time the lock gave way and the prisoners, who were praying for mercy, were taken out. Johnson and Davis were placed in a wagon, but Taylor refused to submit, and was carried to the vehicle, tied to it with a rope, and dragged through the streets of the town. The site selected for the hanging was a SION and all necessary outbuildings, a grist mill, which, together with all water and race rights, which, together with all water and race rights, Johnson and Davis were suspended to one will be sold with said tract. will be sold with said tract.

adjoining the above, of the same quality of land, a lot 13½ acres adjoining said above-mentioned lands, and a moiety of a tract of 62½ acres also adjoining said land. These tracts will be sold as a whole or in parcels as may be deemed desirable, except the 200 acre tract, which will be offered by itself. The above-mentioned lands are easily divisible into several farms, and are rated among the most fertile and desirable tracts of land in Fauquier county.

The groom has a bloody tragedy attached to his history also. In September, 1884, he was a conductor on the J., M. and I. Railroad, and resided near Jaffersonville. While he was out on his run one Saturday night in that month his wife was shot while at her home and died the next day. Mrs. Reynold's statement before she died was that some one had attempted to climb in her room through the window for the purpose of robbing the house. She arose from her of robbing the house. She arose from her bed and was in the act of securing a revol-ver, when she was shot by the man in the window, whom she described. Convicts and ex-convicts have given alleged clews to the perpetrators of the crime, but nothing ever came from them. There has never been the slightest thread of evidence to war-rant the arrest of any one.—Louisville Cou-
